1. At the Paris Commune Shipyard in Gdynia, there are approximately 3,000 workers. They work in one shift, with the exception of those in the mechanical, electrical, and machine-tool workshops, where two shifts of 12 hours each are worked. Those working in one shift are expected to work overtime. The new hull-building section employs approximately 100 workers.
2. Since the autumn of 1950, two Soviet engineers are permanently attached to the shipyard. Both live at the Soviet Consulate and speak Polish fluently, but hide their knowledge from subordinates at the yard.
